The Psychology of Hate Crimes as Domestic Terrorism [3 volumes]: U.S. and Global Issues By Edward Dunbar Ph.D., Amalio Blanco, Desirée A. Crèvecoeur-MacPhail Ph.D.

In this three-volume set, an international team of experts involved in the research, management, and mitigation of hate-motivated violence examines and explains hate crimes in the United States and around the globe, drawing comparisons between countries as well as between hate crimes overall and domestic terrorism.

- Examines the motivation, actions, and thinking of individuals who commit hate crimes, the effects on victims and society as a whole, and the national and international debates on punishments
- Offers guidelines to educate about hate crimes and to serve at-risk populations
- Includes vignettes from both perpetrators and victims as well as psychological profiles of hate crime offenders that serve to bring the academic discussions to life
- Represents an ideal resource for academic libraries that will be of interest to those studying subjects ranging from sociology to ethnic studies and from law to international studies

Editorial Review

Review

"Researchers interested in the controversies surrounding hate crime and acts of terror will find useful observations using data and argument from a wide variety of disciplinary perspectives. Summing Up: Recommended. Graduate students through professionals." - Choice

Review

"Hate crimes are increasing, fueled by growing intergroup tensions around the globe. Going beyond journalistic speculations, rigorous social science research and analysis are badly needed. Fortunately, this timely book series meets this urgent requirement. These volumes contribute new insights and offer important policy recommendations for ameliorating this tragic phenomenon." (Thomas F. Pettigrew, University of California, Santa Cruz)

"Bravo! A much-needed collection. Hate Crimes as Domestic Terrorism is an essential and timely contribution. Using a cultural and psychological lens, contributors frame hate crimes as domestic terrorism, both in the national and global arenas. Simply put, this excellent series is a must-read for anyone interested in building a safe society." (Lillian Comas-Díaz, PhD, Author, Multicultural Care: A Clinician's Guide to Cultural Competence)

"Hate violence has been an important social issue for many decades, but as this book series reveals, its importance has grown immeasurably in recent years. Aggressive acts against people by virtue of their identification with a particular group tear at the social fabric. The psychological and social-behavioral sciences more generally can make useful contributions to our understanding of hate crimes and their more recent incarnation, terrorism. This series will prove invaluable in laying out the issues, the evidence, and future directions for disciplined inquiry and science-based social policy." (Gerald C. Davison, PhD, Professor of Psychology, University of Southern California)

"Edward Dunbar, a long time, prolific, and noted author in the area of hate crimes, has edited an authoritative and exhaustive three volume resource on the topic of hate crimes as domestic terrorism. Dunbar and his colleagues have covered an impressive range of topics in the area of hate crimes from such diverse theoretical and disciplinary perspectives as social and clinical psychology, sociology and criminology, to name but a few of the backgrounds of the noted authors who have contributed to these volumes. These three volumes now constitute a 'gold standard' for authoritative information and thought provoking concepts in the area of hate crimes. It is most useful to have such a diverse and informative collection of writings easily accessible in this format. The books in this ambitious set are an entirely unique contribution to research and theory on hate crimes, and posit the challenging and engaging premise of how we conceptualize hate crimes and their relationship to acts of domestic terrorism. The volumes will be invaluable resources for researchers in the area, a 'must-have' for any library collection, and could form the basis of an excellent multidisciplinary graduate seminar on the topic of hate crimes." (J. Roy Gillis, PhD, Associate Professor, University of Toronto)
