The Courting Campaign (The Master Matchmakers Book 1) By Regina Scott

The Nobleman and the Nanny

Emma Pymont has no designs on handsome Sir Nicholas Rotherford—at least not for herself. As his daughter's nanny, she sees how lonely little Alice has been. With the cook's help, Emma shows the workaholic scientist just what Alice needs. But making Nicholas a better father makes Emma wish her painful past didn't mar her own marriage chances.

Ever since scandal destroyed his career, Nicholas has devoted himself to his new invention. Now his daughter's sweet, quick-witted nanny is proving an unexpected distraction. All evidence suggests that happiness is within reach—if only a man of logic can trust in the deductions of his own heart.

Editorial Review

From Booklist

Sir Nicholas Rotherford might be a brilliant scientist, but Emma Pymont knows her employer is clueless when it comes to being a good parent. As far as Emma is concerned, Nick needs to spend more time with his daughter, Alice, and less time blowing up things in his lab. While Emma knows the importance of family, finding a way to convince Nick of this won't be easy. However, with a little help from the family's matchmaking cook, Emma devises a campaign to capture Nick's attention for his daughter's sake and prove exactly what he is missing out on by spending all his time working. Scott perfectly grounds The Courting Campaign in the Regency era with an abundance of interesting details about the natural philosophy movement of the time, and her flair for nuanced characterization and quiet wit shine brightly in the first installment in her new Master Matchmaker series. --John Charles
